Faith, Public Health, and Global Leaders Unite

At the International, Interreligious Virtual Symposium on Faith and Flourishing: Strategies for Preventing and Healing Child Sexual Abuse

Featuring a Keynote address by the Rev. Dr. Denis Mukwege, Peace Prize 2018 Nobel Laureate

Participate in daily, hour-long round table discussions from April 8-10 to identify actions your communities can take to prevent child sexual abuse and promote healing for its victims.

Participants will also have the opportunity to view a series of presentations by global leaders and experts on the prevention and healing of child sexual abuse, and access evidence-informed tools, training materials, and multi-media resources for prevention and healing.

This landmark symposium provides mental health practitioners, public health professionals, and child welfare advocates a unique opportunity to engage with religious leaders of diverse faith traditions to share experiences, discover new resources and identify strategies they can implement together to prevent child sexual abuse and foster healing for survivors of abuse in their communities.

Who Should Attend:

Faith leaders, public health practitioners, policy makers, child welfare advocates, and those working in education settings, the criminal justice system, health care organizations and the public health sector with an interest in child sexual abuse prevention and healing.

Participants who complete the program will receive a certificate of attendance from the Human Flourishing Program, at Harvard's Institute for Quantitative Social Science.

The symposium is free and open to the public. Register here: <https://hfh.fas.harvard.edu/Symposium-On-Child-Abuse>
